COUNTY STORE BURGLARIZED

Young Residents of Vicinity of Round Top Commit Depredations in their Vicinity, are Caught by Detective Wilson and Plead Guilty.

Breaking into and robbing a country store, making a "money or your life" threat to a man on a dark night at a quiet spot, and contemplating poisoning and robbing a blind resident of the country are a few of the things of which Charles Cassatt aged 18, and Wilbur Lee Gelbach aged 18, both residents of near Round Top, are charged.

Both boys were arrested on Tuesday evening in Gettysburg by Detective Wilson, charged with burglarizing the store of David Weikert near Round Top on Monday night and taking from it some cigars, tobacco cakes, candy and pop. Wednesday they were given a hearing before 'Squire Hill and after hearing all the evidence produced against them pleaded guilty and will be sentenced at Saturday's session of Court.

The boys broke three doors in order to get into the store, and Bigler who is now in one, tearing off part of another and damaging a third with a hatchet used as a battering ram. They took no money and their liberality with the goods they took played a great part in producing incriminating evidence. Detective Wilson found traces of the fresh paint on their clothes and it was this that made the young culprits confess, as the building had been freshly painted and they knew the presence of the paint was damaging to them.

The youngsters have evidently been hearing tales of the terrible West, for the part they have been brought stories about them which would do credit in a Deadwood highway robbery man. Their plan, it is is alleged, was to rob the store, sell the goods and then run away. The day an was supposed to have sold to some of the residents of the vicinity in which they live.

The hold up above referred to took place a few nights ago when each Group was stopped at a dark spot while returning home from Rider's Store. He had bought some groceries there in the evening and the Cassatt boy saw him put his money bag into his trousers pocket. The boy left the store ahead of Mr. Group and when the latter reached a quiet place were kindly greeted with a gun near the throat and called out

"Your money or your life."

Mr. Group was somewhat frightened but looking closely saw who the boy was and told him he recognized him and that he should get out. The boy instantly tightened his grip but soon subsided when his would-be victim told him that he was better stop to keep out of trouble.

Neighbors claim that they have heard the boys talking of way laying Mr. Weikert in a lonely, "dodging" like and robbing the man while unconscious. None of these charges have been proven against them, and will not be used against the boys when they come up for trial.

Clayland, the elder of the boys, is also an Albion Clayland, who is now serving a term in the Eastern Penitentiary charged with forgery. Cassatt is the son of Jefferson Cassatt.

TO OIL STREETS OF GETTYSBURG

Several Squares of Town Streets to be Oiled in Order to Have Dust Nuisance can be Abated without Sprinkling.

Several squares of Gettysburg streets will be oiled within the next few days by a representative of the Atlantic Refining Company from Erie, Pa. Response to the borough. Permission was asked of the borough authorities by the company and those gentlemen willingly granted it.

As is generally known the purpose of oiling the streets is to do away with the dust nuisance. Representatives of the company claim that with two applications the dust nuisance would be unnecessary and that people living along streets thus treated would be spared all of the discomfort of summer dust.

Sixty five barrels of the oil have been received here and it is expected that the work will be done the early part of next week. Several squares in the business and all streets of town in the demonstration and if all conditions are favorable it is thought the work will be completed. The expense will be the ones chosen.

The oil used in the streets will be roped off and oiled. This is allowed to remain undisturbed for a day and a half and the other side is then set aside for treatment, the first being ready for use after lying idle for thirty six hours.

The purpose of the company in making the free demonstration is very apparent, to induce the council to adopt the system on all streets of town to do away with the dust and the necessity of sprinkling. The experiment has been tried in many other places and has proved successful.

NEW OXFORD 6 GETTYSBURG 0

East End Team Shuts out Gettysburg in First Game of the Series. Visitors Completely Outclass Locals. Next Game Saturday.

The first game in the series of three between the New Oxford and Gettysburg base ball teams was played Wednesday afternoon on Mason Field and resulted disastrously for the East Enders, who were defeated by the score of 6 to 0.

The game against Gettysburg's off-day, only thirty men facing Fluher. The New Oxford twirler, only one Gettysburg man reaching second, five errors being chalked up to the locals and ten hits being batted out from Townsend's delivery. At no stage of the game were the Gettysburg boys in the running and the home fans were sadly disappointed. The visitors were outbatting started things in bad shape. Sheetz knocked an easy one to Mealy-Harper on the Mason and the pretzel reached second, advancing to third on a passed ball. Allison threw the ball away soon afterwards and Sheetz scored. The second inning was even a little disaster for the home team, several hits filling the bases and a short hit to center which looked good for a home ing three runs. The sixth and ninth innings were more than Co. Bigler's the last run being made by Shoots who reached first on a long hit to center followed by a bad throw by Zinn.

There were several features of an otherwise lifeless and uninteresting game. Mealy-Harper made a pretty stop and throw to first from back of third, Townsend's batting was the only redeeming all around playing of Bowers at third base also showed some clever work. Umpire Low rence and Heckinger started for New Oxford.

While the Gettysburg boys were fair from playing up to their usual standard, the New Oxford team is a fast one. The East End team played like veterans. Pinn team work, good batting, and fielding made the excellent showing around game characterized the playing of the boys from the neighboring town.

COUNTRY ROAD DRAG.

Practical Device Which Has Been Tried With Success.

Good country roads in the growing country have become a necessity. The use of "getting back to the mud" in the latter and being compelled to take them from a fence to pry out the wagon has passed out in most localities.

PERSPECTIVE OF FARM ROAD.

Now, in order to have good roads the farmers must see to it that they are kept in good condition. To accomplish this there are numerous devices, some satisfactory, some otherwise.

One that has been tried out in the Dakotas and then has created talk in the western agricultural districts is known as the "King drag." The accompanying cuts, the one showing a plane drag, the other a split log drag, will give an idea of the device.

The drag is made of heavy plank or a split log. As shown in the pictures. these are sometimes from four feet apart and dragged diagonally along the road. In this way they do the good work of a road scraper without its faults. They do not plow, as the road implement often does, but scrape and level. Roads are ruined by having ruts and rough places for the water to stand. If these are leveled the water drains off and the road dries. The "King drag" has proved very useful in many sections where farmers use it regularly to keep the surface of the road smooth.

Hints For Stock Owners.

Never tie sheep wet.

Dip the sheep immediately after shearing and again in about three weeks to destroy eggs and all ticks that have escaped at the first dipping.

The lambs should be dipped at the same time, for when the ewes are shorn the ticks flock to the lambs.

Do not leave them out in the spring rains.

When a cow is a little off never put it in with the rest.

Apply the Babcock test and be guided by its teaching, and then shall have good luck in cows and in luck.

If the young pigs should show signs of looseness of the bowels, shut off all feed to the sow but dry oats for a day or two, and the trouble will soon disappear.

Blind the bugs that have the habit of eating chickens by hanging a strip of tin four inches by eight inches by nine from their ears. This will stop them when every everything else has failed.

The newborn colt must have milk during the first half hour of its life or the chances are that it will die.

See that the colt is strong enough to start the milk. If it is not, help it.

The first milk is necessary, as it cause the bowels to move naturally.

If there is any serious constipation, give a three ounce dose of epsom salts dissolved in a pint of soap and warm water.

Keep the colt quiet and feed carefully for a week or ten days, when she can be turned to pasture, but only for a short time at first.

If the mare does not have milk enough, cow's milk may be given to help out, but it must be done with common sense.

Very rich milk should not be used.

Value of Humus.

Humus in the soil has seldom been taken at its full worth. The manner in which it fulfills a second in importance only to the soil itself. Without the presence of plant food in the soil Humus is helpful in keeping up the proper mechanical balance, in holding soils that are more prone to leach, in increasing the power of soils to absorb and hold moisture.

When the humus is exhausted in a soil the mechanical condition suffers and it becomes more impacted, less easily aerated and less easily penetrated by the roots of plants. Some soils so tight as to lift with the wind can be kept from blowing, at least in a great measure, by simply keeping them stocked with grass, roots or other vegetable matter buried. The humus also contributes the power of soils to hold moisture in very great when well stocked with humus. When commercial fertilizers are sown on land they will fail to respond properly unless the land is supplied with humus.

Such being the case, every effort should be made to store the soil with humus. It would be possible to have an excess of humus, but in practice this seldom happens. Humus may be put into the soil in the form of stable manure, of green roots, of green roots, of burned cotton seed and barnyard manure.

DEVELOPING THE HEIFER.

The development of the dairy heifer begins with its feeding when a calf. If the calf is well nourished and kept healthy it should develop a good appetite and should early learn to eat hay and other roughage. There should always be provided plentifully, as this bulky food tends to promote and develop the digestive tract of the young animal. It is always well also to feed the calf what grain is left unconsumed from other animals, and in this way, sometimes, as this makes a lighter feed and one that will be better masticated and digested. Some animals are somewhat dainty as to their feed and are not set with the relish that should always be noticeable in the healthy and well nourished animal. This is usually a result of a disorganized condition of the digestive system and should be corrected without delay, as it may soon become a fixed habit.

The animal that has a poor appetite will never be a profitable dairy animal, and should be carefully watched and not to overfeed. It is always a safe proposition to feed twice a day on such grain as will be consumed in half an hour and as many hay as will be eaten in two hours. If any feed is left in the mail or manger it should be removed, and the next feeding should be correspondingly reduced in the seeds and appetite of the animal. To feed more than an animal will consume in two hours is wasteful. It is a safe proposition to feed as much hay as animal will consume and still wish for more, but if more is fed than will be consumed the appetite for the next feeding will be impaired and the animal will soon be refusing to eat at all or, as the common expression is, will be "off his feed."

The best results in developing heifer calves are secured by feeding plenty of good, bright, clean hay oatsor oat peanut hay during the first season in connection with sweet skimmilk and a grain ration consisting of equal parts by weight of bran, oats and ground oats mixed with cottonseed hulls. The calves may be allowed the run of a small Bermuda grass pasture, but the best development of the calf will be secured by keeping it on a dry feed ration during the first season, especially if it is born later then the 1st of May. If it is turned out under a false idea of economy the young thing suffers much from the best and disappointment is sure to result when it is put in the herd where she is two years old and has to take her place when she is thirty months old. This is a common mistake and one to be guarded against, which can only be secured by liberal feeding of bone and an abundance of wholesome and nutritious food. A stunted animal will never be a good one, but not an excess of flesh should be put on at any time. It never be encouraged, yet a continuous, healthy growth is always desirable, and any check or setback is harmful to the best development of the animal.

Early breeding is desirable as it secures the best results, still great discretion in connection with the growth and development of the animal should be used. If your cow is to give more milk than her self, which, shut off in early life from producing function is its growth and development, and the energies diverted to the development of other parts of the animal. Nature intends the animal to be fully matured it will always remain in a condition of immaturity and unthrift.

The illustration shows a cheap calf shelter which is easily and quickly built. The stanchion in three feet high, with the division from center to center to be one and one-half feet. The stanchion may be made of scantling or a board and form so as to prevent the ground to the manger from being raised. The floor could easily be built as a panel in a frame, and when found out at the age of two years then was very little difficulty about their could be detected in the calves raised with the cow and those raised on the bottle. THE LEADERS

THE TAILORED SUITS

MORE POPULAR THAN EVER

Do you ever wonder whin settles the styles? Your dressmaker depends on the fashion plates. The up-to-date Suit, Dress and Waist Manufacturer—("Wooltex" and others) does it differently. They have their representative in Paris, and other fashion marts, who goes everywhere that fashionable dressed people go. She writes Fashion letters, with sketches, to her home employers every week. Each season she sends home a dozen or so of the handsonest and most practicable models she can buy. The home designers study these models (many of which are entirely taken apart) and from their notes, one goes a hint here, another there, then they set to work in keen competition each trying to outdo the other. All these models are then submitted to a Style Committee. Perhaps only a few will be chosen from a score or more, while the committee will suggest changes in some little detail here or there. The few chosen models often represent an expenditure of several hundred dollars, and yet many of them may be reproduced and sold for twenty or thirty dollars.

The writer of this Ad recently had the privilege of going through the best of the Suit and Coat factories of Cleveland-Ohio, where light, air and proper sanitary conditions prevail. He saw how the garments were drafted, cut, tailored etc., saw all through the different stages of the making. He was introduced to the designers, had a conversation with the style cmmittee and with the head of the advertising department, in fact, looked into the details from office to packing room. He also learned WHY there is a seeming difference in price, not seen at first glance, in suits from factories less careful of a good name than those visited. Learnel why a rightly tailored suit wears longer, is more dressy and sometimes costs a little more than the poorly tailored garment. We hope for success along the lines of the best possible for the price.

LATHAM WINS AIR RECORDS

Surpasses All Performances in Distance and Speed

IN LEAD FOR THE PRIZE

French Monoplanist Eclipses Pouiain's and Wright Records—Circles Statue of Benjamin Spina, Patriot Crashes Into Fence.

Rheims, Aug. 27.—Hubert Latham, the French aviator, took glorious revenge for the hard luck which he experienced in his recent attempts to cross the English channel and his injury which followed his unsuccessful efforts to accomplish some notable feat during the present meeting, by establishing a new world's record for distance, 154 kilometres, 400 metres, or 61.58 miles. Latham covered the distance in 1 hour 59 minutes, in 2 hours, 13 minutes and 3 seconds, and in full daylight in 3 hours, 13 minutes and 9.4-5 seconds, which also are world's records. He was forced to the rain of about 68½ kilometres an hour, as compared with 58½ kilometres an hour by Wright at Lemaiax, and a fierce cross wind from the northeast.

Holds World's Records.

Except for the altitude and endurance records made by Bleriot and Curtiss this was the most sensational performance of the air. Latham now holds the world's records for distance and speed. Count Pauthan, he descended only when the petrol in his tank was exhausted.

Nothing could have exceeded the beauty and impressiveness of the aerial flight, in grace of lines no other aeroplane can compare with the Latham monoplane. The slightly tilted planes from the rear of the engine to the tail, combines when close to a winged canoe, which floats on the air. Rising 100 feet from the distance the a mammoth dragon fly.

The sky was overcast with white, like a living thing, it fought to win against the wind, and at times it did so, even as gusts of tin fled, the higher and faster it tried to climb. All the worst of the storm it was up fully 300 feet above the earth. The appearance of the biplane that the monoplane was chasing, and as the two aeroplanes have been angry rivals.

Three Flights Over 210 Miles.

Latham, earlier in the day, with Count de Lambert, made three flights in the same type, made a flight of more than seventeen kilometres and a half, which finished in the afternoon Count De Lambert covered 210.6 kilometres (130.3 miles) in commanding fashion. Three times he circled the statue of Spina, and latinct more than 210 miles.

Count de Lambert, the American, led two practice spins, but although his machine behaved splendidly the crowd was disappointing. An accident which might have been fatal occurred. With the chance of Curtiss for the international cup, and Latham in the air flight in front of the tribune with a passenger on board, Count de Lambert, in his machine, Bleriot crashed into a fence, and overturned, although the aviator narrowly missed killing several of the spectators.

These contests attracted the classification for the Gordon Bennett cup figures now standing: Latham, 154 kilometres; Curtiss, 150; Count de Lambert, 116; Latham, 70; Curtiss, 20; Latham, 20. Total, 610. These figures were made with different machines.

FOWLER FIERCELY ATTACKS CANNON

Jersey Representative Charges Conspiracy to Rule Congress.

"MALICE IN EVERY ACTION"

Declares "Uncle Joe" Is in a Plot With Senator Aldrich to Control Legislation—Charges Speaker with Partiality, Conceit and Putrid Preference.

One of the most sensational attacks made by a responsible authority upon the speakership of the United States in modern times is contained in an open letter addressed by Representative John Conson by Representative Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, N. J.

Representative Fowler boldly charges the existence of a conspiracy between the speaker of the house and Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, for the purpose of controlling all important national legislation and of defeating both tariff reform and currency reform.

Despairing of securities what he believes is necessary legislation for the reform of the currency and banking laws of the country at this session, he hopes to hasten the control of the present rules as pronounced by Speaker Cannon. Mr. Fowler announced himself as a candidate for speaker at the opening of the special session. He explains that he did this not in the expectation of being elected, but solely for the purpose of bringing conditions before the people the issue of governor currency and banking reform as distinguished from the legislative program on these questions put up by Aldrich and Cannon. This conduct made Mr. Fowler a "conspirator" in the eyes of "Uncle Joe."

Rebecca in his course to that respect Representative Fowler says in his letter to the speaker:

"Do you suppose, sir, that I did not understand that I was, in the consequence of my act when I undertook to do my part in your conspiracy to defeat—

"Do you suppose that I was not aware you would use your power to ordinate conveit, favoritism, putrid preference, and to put in the chair characters possessing absolute power, who would be subservient to your every action under such circumstances?

After accusing Speaker Cannon of deliberately conspiring with Senator Aldrich to put a reactionary republican tax on the tariff bill against the home bill, Mr. Fowler continues:

"I have gone into these details to show that the most unscrupulous and false pen nse and to expose your deliberate plan to defeat the will of the legislative body over which you presided, and to defeat the will of the people and not destroy.

"In the month last you, the Republican speaker of the house of representatives, appointed the Republican chairman of the finance committee of the senate, control, the Republican majority because the adoption of the senate bill and the defeat of the house bill, and both bills throughout for the purpose of discrediting the Democratic party and placing its pledges and the platform of the Democratic party.

"Taking all the facts as they appear in the case, there can be but one lawyer, an intelligent criminal lawyer that would not say that you are a conspiracy. You seem to have measured your conditions with nicety and you have calculated the distances to the square inch and you have figured closely and you seemed to be almost upon the point of consummating your undertaking when the great unknown factor appeared, the determination of the people.

POINTERS FOR CONCRETE WORK

A book could easily be written on "Dobbers in Concrete" and be filled mostly by cuts of cracked pavements, crumbling steps and broken floors, taken from every neighborhood.

We might add and a few cut-rock poultry houses for variety, as we notice many who so enthusiastically went into building concrete block houses now knock on the other side of their mouth. Why? Their house crumbled or is damp.

There are several reasons why concrete cracks and crumbles.

It is no good foundation; coarse sand is poor, or both; too much sand in sand; combination is not mixed or applied properly or the front cracks it.

One part cement to three of clean, sharp sand is proper for building blocks, but no concrete house in ours, even if lumber is high. They are seldom dry, and the dampness cannot easily be kneaded out, as it is held by the walls themselves.

For a cash trap use a concrete house with dirt floor and poor ventilation.

We advocate concrete floors and know from experience they are a practical success.

Here is a picture from our plant that shows concrete that has been laid for years and still stands perfectly dense yet, "disintegration," "dry-rot foot," when concrete floors are mentioned.

Of course fowls go loose when confined in strong quarters into cement A main would.

The pine-trail, up to date method is heavy litter on all floors, and they who use it do not have one case of rheumatism to a thousand. Some people think they have floors suitable at this, Take the stile and rose down along edge of cement and inhale its dampness. Litter keeps our floors warm, and we only have to scatter it to loosen filth. Good concrete floors are assuredly laid in two coats, the rough and finished.

Floors laid on bare ground fail, but a three inch floor laid on two one case of rheumatism to a thousand. Some people think they have floors suitable at this. Floors laid on bare ground fail, but a three inch floor laid on two coats of cinder is a lasting success.

In laying concrete have everything on hand, the water, stoved sharp sand and gravel, cement, tools, mixing platform, etc.

Cement, like time, waits for no man. The first coat, consisting of one part best cement, two of sharp sand and four of clean gravel, should be mixed with water to the consistency required and packed level on surface required.

When this two and a half inch layer has well set sprinkle with water and apply a one-half inch matching coat made of equal parts cement and sharp sand.

Finish smooth, flush to sill and cover all place fowls in house until the floor breaks away from skin.

Concrete nests are a newly hatched chicken house sanitarians and scientist lost sight of when they turned out to damage the terrain. They are made in molds, as are the blocks.

CONCERNING THE SILO

The cement brick silo shown in the illustration was built by an Ohio concern, who says of it:

"It is thirty-one feet high and fifteen feet in diameter in the clear. The blocks are made of the best portland cement and washed stone and have a rock face of one inch. They are made in proportion of one part cement to two parts screenings, mixture then put through air tight. They are made 8 by 8 by 16 inches, and it took 1,200 of these blocks to build this silo.

"The particular part is to get a solid foundation. I leased the wall with a No. 5 wire between each tier of blocks. Of course the cost of a block silo depends upon the kind of material you use and distance to haul it. The block silo cost me complete $225 with about fifteen days' labor, including myself and team.

"There are quite a number of them in this section, and they are giving the best satisfaction. I will not build anything else. I gave this silo a thorough test of last winter, which proves the acid of the ensilage got no into the blocks."

Size of the Silo.

Questions are so frequently asked concerning the size of the silo needed that the following table will be of interest to those who contemplate building one or more during this year. The average quantity of silage fed daily is placed at forty pounds. This is more nearly a maximum than an average, but it is safe to figure liberally, for it is always better to have silage left over than to run short. The average

RURAL GRADUATES' MEETING

The thirty third annual meeting of the Rural Graduates' Association will be at Little Round Top August 26. The program committee consisting of Miss Grace was rendered after which the members of the Alumni joined a general social time.

The meeting was called to order by President Dorothy Hill in the library room at 10:30 o'clock. Miss Edith Wolf, of Littlestown, was elected secretary pro tem.

The minutes were read by secretary Miss B. Wolf and approved by unanimous vote. A letter was received from a social solo by Elwin Rice of Arendtsville, Pa., and was read by the secretary by the President.

Frank J. Myers, A. B. York Springs, a graduate from Princeton University, was then introduced, a man who in a masterly way, Theodore Roosevelt, Hon. Robert E. Lee. He not only showed us that Mr. Lee was a hero but a whole hearten Virginian, one who stood loyal to his state and to the Confederate cause. He spoke of his life career as an officer in the Army, and as being a gentleman of the old Washington and Lee University, showing us at a very appropriate time that Robert E. Lee was not only a man of War but a man who was interested in the greater deeds then that of leading his men into battle throwing out his influence as a leader by peaceful methods.

Taken two and a half score of years have passed we dare not look upon the South favorably but that we do. Live up to the noble Emblem of the Union "Virtue, Liberty, Independence."

HONOR ROLL

From this he gradually drew his address from the Honor Roll of the Alumni of the Alumni, urging them to insist upon attendance of every member, and to keep in touch with the Alma Mater. Attendent backed by an Association of this kind would be a great factor in doing this particular line and that it was a sin to let it die by what reason. Many more thoughts were given to the graduates by the speaker and he left the floor to Harry Prelow who gave us a fine recitation.

Business meeting then followed at which time the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: honorary president, Frank C. Myers A. B. '97; vice president, Edwin Rice; secretary, Miss Edith Wolf, Littlestown; Miss Elsie Stites. A few general announcements made by superintendent H. Milton Roth and the meeting adjourned. HOW THE CAPTAIN GOT HIS REVENGE.

By MARTHA B. DARGAN.
(Copyright, 1906, by American Press Association.)

In the "good old colony days" when work was good as and payment by any means—a young sailor named Whitridge, who was not in sympathy with the religion that he must break with to make a bowtie of those who disagreed with him, shipped before the mast on a vessel bound for Boston from England and stayed there enough to fall desperately in love with Hortobrue, the daughter of a Puritan minister. Subsequently he married in Amsbiah Longshaw, a girl who was not at all congenial to him, a man that was very blue. As soon as the lock in the matrimonial noose he became fascinated with his devil may care ways and forthwith, when he would put it today, shook the said Amsbiah and married the latter. Amsbiah afterward married Comodore Smith, but he never forgave Whitridge for cutting him out.

Time came when Whitridge got a ship of his own and sailed away with the products of his farm and considerable skins of wild beasts—to visit foreign lands and return with the products of and lettres peculiarly, as were needed in the colonies. He left his wife and a little boy and girl who had come to his other wife, Hortobrue, to be sent for, for he was not to meet them again for three years, and then he was unable to encounter the perils of the sea for the sake of being with them both.

But it is a long road that has no turn, and one Sunday morning the captain of the Whitridge ship, which had been built for him by the colonists, looked into the house and with the exception of a few Indians, who were engaged in the cabin, found himself alone. He had left the vessel in charge of the mate and gone to church at the early hour, and the captain, who had been delayed, arrived late on Sunday and that a man was not permitted to enter the church after the first hymn sounds with their benevolent nod to the sexton, who was in charge. Whitridge's wife and children had left Bayonne, N. J., Aug. 27.—Bayonne is beginning to take notice of a city official who has added $6,000,000 to the taxable valuation of the Standard Oil works at Constable Hook.

The bold man who has dared the wrath of the Standard Oil Company is Henry Stutz, tax assessor, whose only reply to the outcries of the oil company's agents was to say that perhaps he would add another million if he is forces warranted it.

The assessment was delivered in Collector Charles W. Fuller, counsel for the Standard Oil company. Colonel Fuller, who lives in Bayonne, met the assessor on the streets and was surrounded with him for doing such an unprecedented thing as to advance the valuation from $7,500,000 to $13,372,019.

"Why did you do it?" he asked.

"Don't shoot so soon," responded Stutz, calmly. "Let us go through it and the first thing you know you may have another million on top of the others."

Bayonne is a retired real estate man, reported to be possessed of a comfortable income. He has served on the city in some capacity out of the reach of further temptation of money.

While Stutz was an expert on real estate values he knew little about the gasing affair big games like the Standard. For years the oil corporation's plant had been an institution untouched by any hand of the public employe, and he was not seen again until Tax assessment time made his appearance to inspect the place. He was accompanied on the day of his visit by who had been working in the yard. They had separated quietly, and met around to look over the place.

Then Stutz began to figure to ask pointed questions and to seek out those employes who had been in the acquainted with the place would know. Then he made his decision and fixed the raising of the valuation by $4,000,000, a figure which made even the richest trust quirm.
